ARTURIAN LOCALITIES.

As far as the Brythonic tribes extended, there we find traces of Arthur. The Gauls knew him not; Finn, Oisín, Cuchullin, were the great Celtic heroes. But the British tradition reached from Brittany to the North, and to British tradition Arthur came as a demi-god. Perhaps he was regarded as a great light that shone before a coming darkness, a great leader who rushed his people to one brilliant period of success before they were finally jarred by Teutonic invasion.

The Welsh claim Arthur, the Cornish, the Bretons, the Lowland Scotch: Cornwall, possessing Tintagel as an asset of faith, claims his birth; Somerset, at Cadbury by the river Camel, claims Camelot; the Cornish claim Camelot points to his last battle, and Glastonbury has boasted of his grave. Tintagel's claim is almost certainly right, so far as there is any certainty in Arthurian legend, and a great deal may be said for the Somerset Cadbury; but for the scene of the last battle and the burial we must look elsewhere than to Camelot and Glastonbury. The last battle, by all authentic tradition, was fought against Picts; and what would Picts have been doing in Cornwall? The grave at Glastonbury, it must be owned with regret, is generally understood to have been a monkish fable. It is not pleasant for a West of England man to surrender these two Arthurian localities; but truth is truth, and Scotland has a claim to them which cannot lightly be put aside.

We will assume that Arthur was a Romanised Briton, born in the late fifth century at Tintagel; his name itself being possibly a Celtic rendering of the Latin Artorius. He became the champion of his race against encroaching Saxons, North Country Picts, and wandering Pagan hordes who fought for lust of plunder. Against these it is probable that Arthur sought to maintain a semi-Romanised, partially Christianised civilisation. He was credited with twelve great battles in which he proved victorious; some of these were certainly in Scotland, and the last, that of Badon Hill, probably in Wessex. All the localities have been much debated, and for the most part the result is confusion. These triumphs are supposed to have established his rule on a firm foundation, so that for many years the British knew comparative peace and good government.

A thirteenth battle, in which he lost his life fighting against his own nephew Mordred, has usually been located at Slaughter Bridge, close to the Cornish Camelot; and that tradition, fortified by the guide-books and by local patriotism, is not likely to die an easy death. Malory, and T. Wynyon after him, both place this battle in the West of England; but the traditions they embody spring from a time when the Celts of Wales and "West Wales" were forgetting the former extent of their tribes, and were limiting their racial pride to a part of the country that was still free from the Teuton. The fact that this last battle was fought against the Picts, and against Mordred, is almost conclusive as to its locality; we cannot bring a large Pictish army so far south as Cornwall. Arthur's sister had married Lleu or Iolo, of the Lothians, and we have reason to believe that Arthur was familiar with this part of Scotland.

His last battle is always stated to have been fought at Camlan; and this name has diverted South-Country writers to the Camels of Cornwall and Somerset. But the Celtic cam in place-names is sufficiently common; it signifies crooked, and we find it in a number of river-names throughout the country. Mordred had become a chieftain of the Picts, he is sometimes spoken of as King of Scotland; and in his opposition to Arthur, who probably claimed some suzerain rights over the Lowlands, he seems to have gathered together a large force of Picts, Scot, with auxiliaries, as appears likely, of Britons and Saxons. If Arthur's rule was just and firm, there would have been many ready to oppose him; besides the many who were always glad to fight for fighting's sake. The battle, whose date is given as 642, was probably fought at Camlan (still pronounced Camlan) on the river Caron, near Falkirk. Arthur was defeated—it is likely that his forces were greatly outnumbered; and he died, either on the spot, or of a wound then received. It is interesting to note that, not many miles distant, is an earthwork still known as Mordred's Ditch; and that at Caron, nearer still, was formerly a mound, or cairn known as Arthur's One (green). We know for certain that some of Arthur's earlier battles had been fought in this district, and there is still a prevalence of Arthurian place-names; even it we confess that absolute certainty is never obtained, the burden of probability is so great as to leave little doubt.

room for doubt. It must be remembered that some doubt has been attached even to Arthur's existence—the very excess and variety of tradition has forced some critics to a dubious attitude; but there is really no ground for utter negation. The hands may have exaggerated, but they can hardly have invented. Of the whole confusing record "two things seem tolerably sure." —that Arthur was born at Tintagel, and that he died at Camlan. And the weight of evidence is that Camlan was in Scotland, not in Cornwall. It should also be mentioned that some Scottish authorities have even claimed Arthur's birth for the North, but nothing has been adduced to substantiate that position.

"A SUCCESSFUL BILL STICKER."

The Mayor of Camberwell, Mr. J. A.
Markkillo, whose sudden death was recorded on August 24, was a man of remarkable personality. Born of humble parentage long before the time of free education, he had little or no schooling when he went out into the world. At the time of his death he was proprietor of one of the largest billposting and advertising businesses in London, and the exclamation, "Advertise Markkillo's Way" is familiar to observers of street hoarding literature.
This business he built up entirely by his own energy, his first headquarters being an old unused post office van, which he rented at 1s. per week. Previous to launching out on this enterprise Mr. Markkillo had served with the colours: he was a private under Lord Roberts in the Afghanistan campaign of 1878-79. Only in November of last year he was elected Mayor of Camberwell, in which district his industry and high business standard had secured him the respect of both municipal parties in the borough. His daughter, Miss Ruby Markkillo, who acted as mayor-ess, is a well known amateur swimmer, and carried off a first prize at the stadium during the recent Olympic Games. Profoundly allegiance to no particular party, Mr. Markkillo was curiously enough, a member of both the Unionist and Radical clubs in Camberwell. He was supported at his last election by Municipal Reformers and Socialists, and his religious beliefs were, apparently, equally adaptable. It is said that on one Sunday he would attend a Church of England service, on another visit a Salvation Army meeting, and on the third worship at a dissenting chapel. To round up the month he would go to a Roman Catholic Church, but whether he went to church or chapel, he contrived to distribute half of his income annually amongst the deserving poor of the neighbourhood in which he lived. Although he was credited with being a wealthy man in recent years, he lived modestly in a small house facing his place of business in Blenheim-grove, Peckham Rye. It is told of Mr. Markkillo that he once expressed a wish that in his obituary he should be described merely as "A successful bill-sticker."

"Clarke's Blood Mixture." I had suffered for seven months, and tried many things without

"A REASONED OPINION."

The Hon. Mr. MURRAY STEWART is to be heartily congratulated upon the part he took in the debate in the Legislative Council on Thursday when it fell to his lot to introduce two motions which practically amounted to votes of censure, the first, on an Imperial official, the second on the local Building Authority. All the honours rested with him. The manner in which he exposed the wretched political manoeuvring of Colonel SKEIR in the optimistic debate in the House of Commons, when the newly appointed Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies went out of his way to jibe and flout at the Colony of Hongkong, was a very masterly piece of work. Coming from a man who delights in clear-cut, logical analysis, Mr. Murray Stewart could not help but present his case in the dry light of shrewd, dialectical reasoning and keeps.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The German Mail of the 26th August was delivered in London on the 27th inst.

To-day begins the Jewish New Year, 5669, and all Jewish firms in the Colony are holding holiday.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon recently taunted Mr. W. J. Bryan with being a millionaire and Bryan responded by showing that he was only worth a paltry $100,000.

During a reception given to Mr. W. J.

Bryan, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, at Wheeling, Va., an enthusiastic woman kissed him. The lady was arrested and fined.

Manila was swept by a big storm on September 19th, evidently coming within the onrushing radius of the big typhoon which afterwards traversed the China Sea and broke over Touloune. Some little damage was done in the city, but the heavy rains were looked upon as a Godsend by the Sanitary authorities, for they swept away a lot of pestiferous rubbish.

The Victoria Cinematograph continues to attract large audiences every evening.

The pictures are up to their usual high standard, while Miss Macdonald, the talented singer and dancer, is already a great favourite with the patrons. To-night and to-morrow night two excellent films, "The Lady Barometer," and "The Shipowner's Daughter," will be shown in addition to the usual programme.

An exceptionally good programme has been arranged for this evening at the Alexandra Cinema-theatre. Miss Tina Latoru will appear in entirely new songs while Professor Bjorl will mystify with quite a fresh programme of magic. In the second part he will be assisted by Miss Latoru in his presentation of "Resuscitation," a new and capital illusion. A unique set of pictures will also be shown.

It is said that the official estimate of Japan's foreign trade for the current year is that the exportable balance will amount to $3 or $4 million yen. At present the figure is only $3 millions, and all experience justifies expectation that exports will predominate during the next four months. But on the other hand, there are from $5 to $6 million yen worth of machines and general goods in the bonded warehouses. These, says the Japan Mail, have to be gradually taken delivery of, and they will probably exceed the relief afforded by surplus exports between now and December.

There is apparent a disposition on the part of a good many people in Manila to get panicky over the unfortunate outbreak of cholera in the city within the last few days. The situation looks a bit serious, just at present, it is true, but there are many indications that it will not last. In the first place the campaign against it is being well organized and in the second place the outbreak seems to be rather sporadic in its nature and the chances are that the prompt action of the authorities will prevent it from becoming well rooted.

At any rate, the wisest plan is to be unfettered.—Cable News-American.

Two or three important books are promised from Mr. Murray Stewart. One is the "Military Memoirs" of General Sir

Joseph Thackerell, G.C.B. It is based on the journals and letters of the gallant soldier, and is written by Colonel Wylie, C.B. General Thackerell was born in 1781 and died in 1859. He was an officer in the 18th Hussars during the Cornish campaign, which will always be associated with the military services of Sir John Moore. He afterwards saw much hard fighting under the Duke of Wellington in the Peninsula campaign, and was present at the Battles of Victoria, the Pyrenees, Orthes, Toulouse, and lost his left arm at Waterloo. He afterwards saw much active service in India in the first Afghan war, the Gwalior campaign, and in both the wars against the Sikhs, and rose to be second in command to Lord Gough in the Army of the Punjab. Unlike the majority of soldiers, Sir Joseph from his earliest days kept a diary in which he jotted down his impression at the moment, of men as well as of battles. The book, therefore, promises to be of exceptional interest. It is to contain portraits, maps, and other illustrations.

ECZEMA COVERED FACE AND CHEST

Little Boy Suffered Very Badly—

Under Medical Care for Weeks—

Became Steadily Worse—Doctor

Said It Would Last for Years—

One Box of Cuticura Cured Him.

MOTHER RECOMMENDS

CUTICURA TO FRIENDS

"Two years ago my little son was suffering very badly from eczema. I took him to a doctor who attended him some weeks and still he got worse.

Sores completely covered his face and chest. Being dissatisfied with the treatment, I took him to another. I tried his remedies and still my little boy grew worse. The doctor told me that the eczema would not go away for years.

One morning I saw an advertisement of Cuticura and made up my mind that I would try it. I purchased one box of Cuticura Ointment and one of Cuticura Soap. After using them the first few days, one saw a great change. The eczema was completely gone in three weeks.

We still have some of the Ointment left and continue to use Cuticura Soap.
